University of Hertfordshire

Climb the career development ladder with our Postgraduate courses

This course trains students to become Educational Audiologists. It provides opportunity for the development of knowledge and critical reflection on the scientific principles and research underlying audiological practice and habilitation of children and young people who are deaf. Students will be encouraged to develop and relate evidence-based practice to their own professional experience. Practical workshops, and work-based placements are used to support the acquisition of practical and professional skills. Teaching and learning experiences include lectures and demonstrations, tutor and student-led seminars and discussion groups.

MSc/PGDIP DEAF EDUCATION STUDIES (EDUCATIONAL AUDIOLOGY)

All MSc/PGDip students undertake a minimum of 120 hours work-based experience in a combination of NHS Audiology Clinics, and Education-based Audiology roles, supervised by well-qualified and experienced practitioners. Practice in the workplace is based on consolidation and evaluation of skills (by both the student and their workplace mentor) which forms part of the student's Clinical and School Audiology Placement (CASAP). Students provide on-going critical reflection related to their skills practice and learning needs.

Practical skills training includes: pure tone audiometry, impression-taking for over 5 year olds (BSA certificate), radio aid balancing, hearing aid programming, room acoustics measurement and test box measurements.

The course is blended learning with residential study weekends and distance learning in between. The MSc/PGDip has an intake every two years. Stand-alone modules are on offer as CPD for those not intending to complete an MSc/PGDip.
